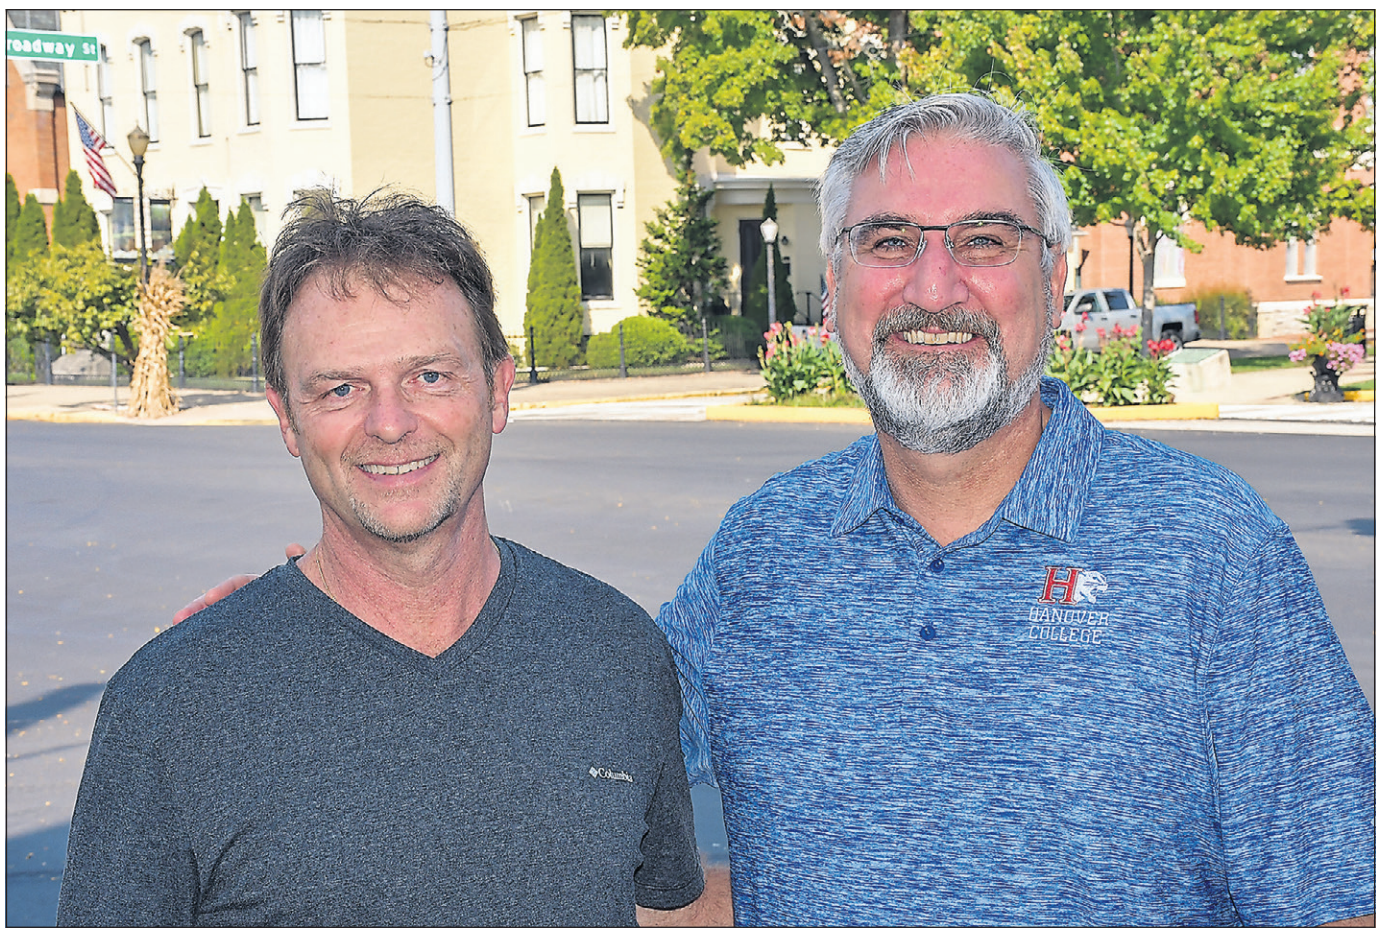
Governor loves his weekend spent in Jefferson County



Madison Mayor Bob Courtney, left, and Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb spent some time walking together through downtown Madison during the governor's visit to Jefferson County last weekend.

BY BOB DEMAREE

"Indiana is a great state with a lot of great towns," Indiana Gov. Eric Holcomb said on Sunday after walking through downtown Madison but he loves his time in Jefferson County.

Holcomb, who was in the county last weekend as the keynote speaker on Saturday for the Boy Scouts of America Hoosier Trails Council Camporee at Hanover College, spent the night in the new Fairfield Inn and Suites on the riverfront and then walked through downtown Madison with Mayor Bob Courtney on Sunday.

He was anxious to expand his time in Jefferson County. "I'm milking it," said Holcomb, a 1990 graduate of Hanover College, who said he loves his time in the community.

Holcomb reflected on being in college in the late 1980s, and the times he would spend in Madison, and how he grew fond of the city.

Memories were rekindled as local musician Rusty Bladen and his wife, Andra, happened upon Courtney and Holcomb talking at Broadway and Main streets. Holcomb remembered that during his college years that Bladen had played music for parties at Hanover College.

Another passerby reminded Holcomb about his visit to Carl Risk's Men's Quarters in Hanover after he had become Governor. "I just needed a haircut," said Holcomb, who noted he didn't think much about it since that's where he had got his haircuts in college, except he found the barber shop had moved from across the street, previously located where the Hanover CVS now stands.

Holcomb said he's impressed with all that's happened to improve Madison in the years since he graduated. "You can see all the progress over the years," and yet the city has maintained its historic character by "treasuring your heritage. Madison is a national gem," said Holcomb, characterizing Madison as city that's not just beautiful, but offers a good quality of life for its citizens. "It makes me proud to be a Hoosier."

Holcomb specifically mentioned the Fairfield Inn and Suites, the former Eagle Cotton Mill building that had been deteriorating for many years until it was rehabilitated and transformed into an 85-room boutique hotel and conference center.

Request made to increase ARP funds for drinking water project

BY BOB DEMAREE

With $6.2 million to spend from what the county received in American Rescue Plan funds, County Council decided on Wednesday to schedule a joint meeting with County Commissioners in November on how to prioritize allocating that money.

Earlier this year, the Commissioners earmarked half of that, $3.1 million, but they are in the process of having that reviewed by attorneys to be certain how they are spending it meet stipulations in the ARP.

"If you don't do what you're supposed to with that money, they are going to want that back," Council member Judy Smith said.

Council president Pam Crozier asked that the Commissioners contribute more to the City of Madison's drinking water infrastructure project — estimated to cost $15 million. In the Commissioners' initial draft in August for spending the ARP funds, $200,000 was earmarked for drinking water infrastructure, much less than the $2.5 million requested by Madison Mayor Bob Courtney.

Crozier asked the Commissioners to reconsider and provide more funding to the drinking water infrastructure project. "This is a big initiative" she said, noting the project affects most of the county's residents with Canaan, Dupont and Rykers' Ridge water companies all drawing water from Madison.

"You should contribute more to this project," said Crozier, adding support now will impact water rates not just in the City of Madison, but in water companies in the county that depend Madison for their water.

Commissioners president David Bramer said he anticipates allocating more for the drinking water infrastructure project, but that there are other water

Phagan's musical dream coming true this Friday

CHARLIE ROHLFING
CHARLIE'S BEAT

Eric Phagan looks at his life as sort of inverted from the normal flow of events. While most of us were getting married and starting a family and trying to get our careers off the ground, Eric was living his dream as a successful young artist, travelling the world and honing his craft.

"I'm a Madison boy," Eric explains, "Class of '98 at MCHS, and then I went directly to the Herron School of Art & Design up in Indy. I also went to the Penland School of Crafts down in North Carolina. And I was fortunate to study art abroad in Paris for a year.

"It was my time in Paris that really solidified my style. I came back totally energized, with my eyes open and my mind clear on what I wanted to express and how to do it.

"My art career really started to get traction, with gallery representation in a couple of cities, some national art shows displaying my work, and even a few of my pieces getting selected for permanent exhibits, like the San Angelo Museum of Fine Arts down in Texas. The decade of my 20s was very exciting and professionally fulfilling.

"But I was missing something important in my life, and that was a family. I came back to the Madison area, fell in love with my future wife, Jessica, and am now the proud father of three kids, Vinson, Connor and Callie.

"I'm teaching art at Madison High School full time now, but I'm also a full-time artist with my studio downtown at Gallery 115. And I'm also very much a full-time dad right now.

Is this friendship worth keeping?

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I've been with my significant other for almost three years now. We live together and have a pretty good life. I have a child from a previous relationship who's in high school. My significant other has no kids, but he is very involved with extracurricular activities and is a perfect example of a parent.

When we first met, I was advised that "not wanting more children" is a deal-breaker on his end, and I, at the time, kinda said, "We'll cross that bridge when we get there." Well, we are there, and I now know for certain I no longer want any additional children. What should I do? — Screwed

Dear Screwed: Communication is key — especially with a life partner. You can't expect them to read your mind. Tell him how you feel, and do it soon. It's not fair for him to keep believing in a future you've already written off.

Dear Annie: Last year, during the pandemic, my very first boyfriend of a year and a half, "Joey," admitted he wanted to end it because he had been talking to another girl during the period we were in quarantine. He said it was a girl I didn't know.

During this time, our state was in a strict lockdown. I was crushed but decided he wasn't for me if he would do that. My best and closest friend of seven years, "Pam," consoled me.

Pam admitted then that he had shown interest in her around that time, but Pam said she told him off immediately. She always thought he was annoying and said she didn't respond to him at all except to tell him off. Pam has never had a boyfriend but always wanted one. Her parents wanted her to wait until she was a bit older. She seemed a bit jealous of the time I spent with Joey, so I always made it a point to spend alone time with her as well. Joey was a part of our larger friend group at school but was alienated after he and I broke it off. Everyone thought he was an idiot to cheat on me like that.

Last week, a mutual friend said Pam told her she was the reason Joey and I broke up last year. I confronted Pam today, and she admitted that she was the other girl. She was very upset and sorry. She said Joey had called her and professed how much he liked her and she, during this hourlong phone call, entertained the idea of liking him as well. She said it was no more than that before she came to her senses and refused his idea. Pam says she had wanted to tell me but just couldn't, and it has been eating at her for the past year. What should I do? Forgive Pam, who has never done anything like that before, or stop being her friend? — Jilted Teen

Dear Jilted Teen: What Joey did to you was hurtful. Talking to another girl behind your back was betrayal enough, but doing it with your best friend was especially nasty of him. And surely the fact that Pam "entertained the idea of liking him" only rubbed salt in the wound.

But after taking a minute to process, it seems that Pam did everything right. Despite her jealousy that you had a boyfriend, she "came to her senses and refused his idea."

Our actions define us, and Pam's actions prove that she cares about your friendship more than a new fling. Joey's actions, on the other hand, already ruined one relationship; don't let them damage another.

Boyfriend goes AWOL

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I was in a nine-month relationship up until about a month ago. Without going into a lot of detail, the guy I was seeing decided to ghost me without any warning. We had a great conversation on Thursday, and then on Friday morning, he blocked my calls, emails, etc.

I have no idea what happened. Later that Thursday night, I had accidentally FaceTimed him (my phone was in my pocket), and his son answered. Keep in mind I had never met his son the whole time we were together.

This is not the first time he has stopped speaking to me for reasons only he knows, but this is the first time he has gone this far. I'm trying to move past what he has done, but I am having a hard time. Even though we dated for only nine months, I talked to him about everything, and we had such great times together. I want to know why he did what he did to get some closure, but I don't know what to do. Do I need to just let this go? — Ghosted

Dear Ghosted: Resist the temptation to speculate. Whatever his reasons are, the end result is the same: He's not reliable, not communicative and, most importantly, not around. And he is a total jerk in the way he treated you.

Write him a letter explaining your confusion and your hurt feelings. Send it to him to get any pent-up feelings off your chest, but don't expect a response. A guy who disappears typically doesn't want to be found.

If he changes his mind and reaches out to you, and you take him back, it will only be a matter of time before he cuts you off again. That's him, not you. After writing your letter, run a hundred miles from this guy.

Dear Annie: Several years ago, a friend and I took a series of art classes offered by our local senior center. My friend truly excelled and completed two beautiful paintings. I enjoyed the classes immensely but did not do nearly as well.

I signed up again this past spring. With a lot of individual help from the instructor, I painted a pretty good painting of my house. I had it framed and hung it on my living room wall.

My friend saw it, and on her next visit, she presented me with a painting she did of my house. There is no question that hers is a better rendering of my house, but I want my painting to remain on the wall.

When I told her this and refused to switch paintings, she became annoyed and hasn't spoken to me since. My husband feels I should have hung her picture and taken it down when she left. This friend occasionally stops by unannounced, so I don't think that is a great solution.

What are your thoughts? — I've Peeved Picasso

Dear I've: The painting your friend gifted you was exactly that — a thoughtful gift. This does not give her the right to decide then where it belongs in your home. Find a nice place to keep her painting and share it with her.

You can be appreciative and impressed with her painting while also being proud of your own and the progress you've made in class. Express this to her as well as another thanks for her gift. It's far too silly a matter to lose touch over.

GOVERNOR

"They took an eyesore and turned it into an icon," said Holcomb.

And Holcomb said he is optimistic of even greater things for Madison, particularly after hearing Courtney's initiatives for the city.

"I am more than encouraged," Holcomb said. "I'm bullish about the future. It's evident and within sight. It's real and there's a plan. You're going to see it unfold before your eyes."

Holcomb also is encouraged about Indiana. He said state revenue in September was $260 million more than forecasted and "that's more money to invest" in programs dealing with issues such as mental health, infant mortality and addiction recovery. And for economic development throughout the state.

The governor talked about the success of the Regional Economic Acceleration and Development Initiative in which all 92 counties have formed 17 regions competing to be among 10 recipients of $50 million grants.

Holcomb said he is thrilled how the effort is pulling communities together throughout the state to work together to bring economic development to the state. "We're stronger together," he said. "We have projects that are not only shovel ready, but they're shovel worthy."

Holcomb also said his appearance at the BSA Hoosier Trail Camporee was meaningful in that it reminded him of the 12 points of the Scout law to be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent. "We need more of that," said Holcomb.

In particular, Holcomb referenced the need for more kindness. The Governor said he had seen Madison's Kindness mural at Second and Mulberry streets and that he himself keeps a reminder nearby with a pillow that says "Kindness."

"Kindness goes a long way," he said. "It's infectious once it's realized."

"It was great to see Governor Holcomb in town last weekend. His affinity for our community is obvious and we are grateful for his leadership," Courtney said. "We had an opportunity to share with him our workforce and destination development plans for the next three years which are very exciting and for which he has been a major part in making happen."

"But I also have a part-time job which is playing music. About 12 years ago I bought a drum kit and taught myself to play. I'm the drummer in the band Slick River Rockets with Chip Binzer, Rick Bennett and Brook Reindollar.

"There was a drummer some years back here in Madison named Charlie Warren, and he had a huge collection of drum equipment. They had a big auction of all his stuff, and I picked out this Ludwig black oyster pearl kit that is basically the same as Ringo Starr played.

"To this day I still use that same kit. The only thing changed from when Charlie Warren owned it is a new skin on the snare, and I painted Slick River Rockets on the front of the bass drum. It works perfectly for the style of music I like to play, which is rockabilly and early rock.

"I'm not sure why a guy my age, born in the early 80s, is so into the music of the 50s. I guess I've always been immersed in that time period. My dad worked on old cars from that time. And I grew up listening to Elvis and Jerry Lee and Chuck Berry. Back to the Future is my favorite all time movie!

"That's why I'm so excited about Wayne Hancock coming to Madison this Friday. I've been listening to him for about 15 years. I think his sound is best described as kind of juke joint swing, sort of pre-Sun Records. Hank Williams with drums, you could say.

"So going all the way back to 2008 or so when RiverRoots was still happening, I started bugging Jane Vonderheide. I'd tell her, you gotta book Wayne Hancock. I told Greg Ziesemer about him. Anybody who would listen. And then finally the Kindred Folk Society booked him for 2020, and COVID got in the way. I was heartbroken.

"But the day is finally here, this Friday, the 15th, at Red Bicycle Hall. And to make it even better, my good friend Anthony Ray Wright is the opening act. I'm so excited I can barely stand it!"

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

If you're a fan of the old-time country sound, and I'm talking the REAL old-time sound, like Hank Williams Sr., then you have a treat waiting for you at Red Bicycle Hall this Friday. Wayne "The Train" Hancock is finally coming to town, after a long COVID delay, as part of the Kindred Folk Society Series of concerts. If Wayne's version of juke joint swing doesn't have you up and tapping your feet, then you are just so lonesome I could cry! Anthony Ray Wright will open the show with his special brand of Texas-tinged rockabilly. Another show of note is an artist called Miss Tess who is literally passing through town on Sunday, and she has been prevailed upon to pause for the night and do a show in Acree Alley, next to Thomas Family Winery at 6 p.m. She has kind of a vintage, old-timey vibe, and it should be a fun show.

MADISON COURIER GIRLS GOLFER OF THE YEAR

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

When Keara Eder was a little girl, she was obsessed with Superman. Whether it was backpacks, drawings or pajamas, she couldn't get enough of Clark Kent's alter-ego.

Today, Eder has a new comic book hero, one who does all of the same things as the high-flying Man of Steel but with one major difference.

"Captain Marvel was the first female superhero that had her own movie, and she was just this really powerful character," Eder said. "She's very similar to Captain America in that, when they're both pushed down they get back up. And I found that I liked that strong character and I wanted to have a reminder of her on the course. I really love her character."

Playing with a Captain Marvel ball-marker attached to her hat, Eder has done some amazing things over the past four years. She has earned low-medalist

Madison senior Keara Eder is the Madison Courier Girls Golfer of the Year for a third straight year. She has earned low-medalist honors 44 times and become the first player in school history to win the sectional championship for four straight years. She has won the Hoosier Hills Conference title, set school records for both nine- and 18-holes and this season was one of just three players to earn both All-State and Academic All-State honors in the same year.

Carroll squads ousted from tourney

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Carroll County's soccer teams both saw their seasons end with losses in the KHSAA Eighth Region Tournament quarterfinals on Monday.

The Carroll boys lost 4-1 at home to Spencer County while the girls lost 10-0 at Simon Kenton.

Carroll County played Spencer County nearly even in every way but the scoreboard in the 4-1 loss. The Panthers had 11 shots to Spencer's 14, shots on goal were even at 8-8, and Carroll had four corner kick chances to just one for the Bears. But Spencer made the most of its chances to claim the win.

Jack Kennedy scored each of Spencer's first two goals as the Bears took a 2-0 lead at into halftime. Kennedy's first goal came in the 30th minute when he collected a hard rebound off goalie Cyrus Tuttle and slammed it into the net for a 1-0 lead.

Kennedy scored again just four minutes later when he drove down the right side of the field and sent a perfect cross into the box that beat Tuttle for the goal.

Neither team scored again until Spencer pushed the lead to 3-0 in the 67th minute on a goal by Carter Ward. Joao Jesus answered for Carroll just six minutes later with a terrific turnaround goal — his 21st of the season — on an assist from Matthew Bright to get the Panthers on the board and give Carroll some life.

But the Bears' Alexander Aberli ended the hopes for a comeback with a score in the 77th minute as heavy rain began to fall for the final 4-1 margin.

Spencer then lost 4-0 to South Oldham in the semifinals on Tuesday to end its season with a 13-7 record.

The Rebels were given the honor of hosting the semifinal round, but the team's home field was deemed unacceptable by school officials for the game. Madison's varsity will be playing No. 9 Heritage Hills in the 2A Regional semifinals on the turf field at the high school.

Southwestern's game will start at 6 p.m. with gates opening at 5 p.m. Southwestern's staff will work the gate, concessions and provide supervision and security. Tickets are $8 and will be available at the main gate only.

Carroll honors Coach 'Mac' with Wall of Fame induction

BY THE COURIER STAFF

Clyde McConnaughhay was inducted into the Carroll County Wall of Fame during Friday's game against Trimble County, the first such coach to be honored.

Coach "Mac" coached the Panthers for 13 seasons over two separate stints, from 1974 to 1985 and again in 1999.

McConnaughhay's teams posted a losing record just twice during that span, going 5-6 both times, and went a school-record 10-2 in 1985 when the Panthers reached the state semifinals. Overall, he was 102-44 at Carroll County, winning nearly twice as many games as the next-best record in school history (Doug Barry with 52 wins) and his .698 winning percentage is tops in program history.

The Panthers won the North Central Kentucky Conference seven times under McConnaughhay's watch, the district championship five times and were regional champions in 1985. The Panthers made the playoffs in nine of his 14 seasons on the sidelines and were the regional runners-up four times.

In addition, McConnaughhay coached baseball at the school and won the 1981 regional championship, was the 1979 regional runner-up, and won two district titles.

Along with coaching football at Carroll, McConnaughhay also coached at Scott County High School and was an assistant coach in the college ranks at both Georgetown College, his alma mater, and at Virginia-Lynchburg.

Colts must move on quickly after collapse in Baltimore

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Painful loss, painful loss," he said less than 24 hours after watching a 16-point, fourth-quarter lead evaporate in what seemed like a blink of an eye Monday night.

Then he quickly moved on — just as he needs his team to do after losing a game that could have turned around the Colts' season. They'll get another chance Sunday when they face Houston in their first home game since Sept. 19.

Reich found plenty to like on tape. Quarterback Carson Wentz was efficient. The run defense played well and for three quarters, Indy was the dominant team.

But the Colts spent the final 12 minutes scrambling, particularly on a defense that finished without three of its top four cornerbacks because of injuries. Ravens quarterback Lamar Jackson, the league's 2019 MVP, took advantage by throwing two touchdown passes and connecting for two 2-point conversions in the final 10 minutes of regulation. He completed the comeback with another TD pass midway through overtime.

And Indy again squandered red-zone opportunities by settling for two late field-goal chances, which could have sealed the game. Instead, injured kicker Rodrigo Blankenship's best chance was blocked, and he missed the potential winner wide left as time expired in regulation.

The result left the Colts frustrated, flabbergasted, and two games behind Tennessee in the AFC South.

Now, with a short week, there's no time to waste in leaving this loss behind.

If the Colts beat the struggling Texans, it could help take some of the sting out of Monday's historic collapse. If they lose and fall to 1-5, Indy would have to replicate its 2018 comeback run just to make the playoffs.

We've got to keep fighting to get better, learn from our mistakes, learn how to finish games," Reich said. "Players and coaches, we're all in it together and we've all got to do it together."

WHAT'S WORKING

The oft-criticized Wentz has strung together his two best games the last two weeks and played well enough to win both. No, he hasn't been perfect. But he's mostly avoided turnovers — even with two sprained ankles — and on Monday he led the Colts to four straight scores and consecutive field-goal attempts on their final six possessions.

WHAT NEEDS HELP

Red-zone offense. Indy had three drives of nine or more plays that resulted in no points and went 1 for 4 in the red zone while failing to score on two of those trips inside the Ravens 20-yard line. It turned out to be the difference in a win or a loss.

INJURIES

Reich's only update on Blankenship was that he was scheduled to get an MRI on Tuesday. Cornerback Xavier Rhodes and safety Andrew Sendejo have both entered the concussion protocol. Reich wouldn't say whether right tackle Braden Smith (foot) could return this week. Left guard Quenton Nelson (sprained ankle) and receiver T.Y. Hilton (neck surgery) remain on injured reserve and safety Ibraheim Campbell (ankle) was put on practice squad injured reserve Tuesday.

KEY NUMBER

120-1 — Since moving to Indy in 1984, the Colts had won 120 consecutive games when leading by at least 16 points in the fourth quarter. Now they're 120-1.

NEXT STEPS

Turning the page quickly is a must if the Colts hope to get this season back on track. The good news is they played well offensively and defensively, until the secondary became depleted. But Indy ended the Ravens' NFL record-tying streak of 43 consecutive games with 100 or more yards rushing and Wentz seems to be getting in sync. It's a promising combination — if the Colts can figure out how to finish games.

Burrow is OK; Bengals move on after OT loss

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Bengals' strange overtime loss Sunday was overshadowed by news that quarterback Joe Burrow got a precautionary postgame trip to the hospital.

Burrow, already playing on a surgically repaired left knee, was beaten up in the 25-22 loss to Green Bay, suffering a throat bruise that affected his voice afterward. Coach Zac Taylor reported that Burrow wasn't admitted to the hospital and is expected to play against Detroit this week.

"Joe's back in the building," Taylor said. "He's in good shape. (I) expect no limitations from him, but we'll take it day to day."

Sunday's game was finally settled by Packers kicker Mason Crosby, who missed three potential winning field goals before finally hitting a 49-yarder in overtime.

Burrow was sacked three times and hit eight other times but isn't sure when his throat was hit. It could have been a violent tackle by two Packers at the end of a second-quarter run that left him on the ground for an extended period. But he ran off under his own power and was on the field for the next series.

Burrow finished with 281 passing yards and two touchdowns but also threw two interceptions.

Kicker Evan McPherson could have won the game late for the Bengals (3-2) but missed on two field-goal attempts, one with 26 seconds left in regulation and again in overtime.

It was a tough way to lose to the Packers and Aaron Rodgers, who threw for 344 yards and two touchdowns.

"There's a lot of teams that each week walk off the field and they feel like there's just an inch here or there that would have made a difference," Taylor said Sunday. "And today just didn't go our way. It hurts to lose, but we've got to pick ourselves up and go on the road next week."

WHAT'S WORKING

The Burrow-to-Ja'Marr Chase connection. Chase, a former teammate and favorite target of Burrow at LSU, has been outstanding after dealing with dropped passes in the preseason. He caught six of 10 targets for a season-high 159 yards, including a 70-yard touchdown late in the first half that cut Green Bay's lead to 16-14.

WHAT NEEDS HELP

Pass protection, as usual. It's better than last year but hasn't been good enough against top opponents to keep the team's franchise quarterback from being battered. Burrow was lost for the season to a knee injury in Week 11 last year and had to work his way back in 2021 after surgery.

STOCK UP

Much maligned last season, the defense is improved and did an impressive job stopping the Packers in crucial situations and forcing them to bring on Crosby for field goal attempts a total of seven times (he converted four). Cincinnati was on the verge of winning several times against a perennial playoff team, and the defense was a big reason.

"The defense is holding it down for the offense," Chase said. "They're giving us the ball back and opportunities, making plays. We've just got to capitalize on stuff like that. We have the ball, we have to take advantage of it."

STOCK DOWN

McPherson, the rookie out of Florida, already had two winning field goals this season. He had converted 5 of 6 attempts coming into the game, but had a rough afternoon. With 26 seconds left in regulation his 57-yard attempt bounced off the right upright. With another chance in overtime, McPherson thought he had a 49-yarder — he jumped into the arms of holder Kevin Huber after he hit it — that went just left at the top of the upright.

KEY NUMBER

19.8 — average yards per catch this season for Chase through five games (23 catches, 456 yards).

INJURIES

LB Jordan Evans (knee) was put on injured reserve Monday. G Jackson Carman and RB Samaje Perine went on the reserve/COVID-19 list. ... Taylor said safety Jessie Bates, who was hurt late in the game, will be OK for Sunday.

NEXT STEPS

The Bengals have a great chance to pick up another victory against the 0-5 Lions. If Cincinnati can prevail, it will equal its win total for all of last season (4-11-1).

County Tourism initiates effort to bring youth baseball tournaments into county

BY BOB DEMAREE

An effort to draw more youth baseball tournaments to Jefferson County is moving forward with the Jefferson County Board of Tourism approving an appropriation of $6,000 at its meeting Monday.

In working toward a marketing focus, it's an effort that board member Trevor Crafton said provides a starting place, particularly since he and board member Curtis Chatham think that sports and recreation provide the best opportunity to bring more tourism dollars into the county.

To move the youth baseball effort forward, the board will utilize Madison native Dan Galvin, owner of Content-1, a marketing digital firm. Galvin is also currently partnering with Michael Fortunato in developing a collaborative marketing plan for the county.

Chatham expressed his initial interest of serving on JCBT was to develop Jefferson County as a sports destination, noting early on he had expressed, "We need some kind of drag racing in the county. We have too many people going out of the county" for that. He said, "We have done a good job getting our return (from tourism), but we need to do something new or different" because if the county continues just with the existing activities "I don't know if we can keep that pace up."

"Everyone has an interest," Crafton said. "Everyone is passionate about something. We would really like to do a hot dog eating contest or a rodeo or drag racing or a yo-yo competition, or whatever it is, and all those things I would love. We would love to be able to say, yes, do it all. But in this scenario you've got to pick the lowest hanging fruit, and you can debate what's the lowest hanging fruit."

Crafton said, in his opinion and experience, he sees youth baseball tournaments as "what can generate the most capital in a short amount of time." He said others may feel differently, but he thinks a focus on youth baseball provides a beginning point.

"You start out here then you continue to branch out," he noted. "You could sit and debate for 12 months and accomplish nothing or you can just do something because we are all educated, creative people, we can roll with something as long as something begins."

Chatham noted that JCBT doesn't own the facilities in the county, so a process needs to be developed to work with those who do. "We need to establish an inventory of what we have, then we can go to market" and begin developing events. In addition to the marketing aspects, Crafton requested Galvin work toward gathering an inventory of facilities, and then communicate with the managers of those facilities. "That's valuable information for us to have," he said.

Crafton said he and Chatham both know of the possible revenue that can be generated from their experience as parents traveling to youth baseball events at venues in other communities. "I can tell you what he and I spend. We are just two families and each team has 10 to 12 kids, and they've got their grandparents."

Crafton said families are spending hundreds of dollars to play and all of that money is going into other communities.

"That's why I push for youth baseball to initiate that because we do have the facilities," said Crafton, listing numerous ballfields throughout Jefferson County.

Board president David Bramer said he agrees with the value of pursuing sports and recreation to drive tourism dollars to Jefferson County. "You've seen it work. I've seen it. It just needs to get organized."

"We have some of the best facilities around, and we're in such a pocket between Lexington, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, Evansville" that teams can be drawn from all of those areas, Chatham said. "We have a niche that once we get organized we're going to capitalize on that."

honors 44 times and become the first player in school history to win the sectional championship for four-straight years. She has won the Hoosier Hills Conference title, set school records for both nine- and 18-holes and this season was one of just three players to earn both All-State and Academic All-State honors in the same year.

With that resumé, it's easy to see why Eder is The Madison Courier's Girls Golfer of the Year for a third-straight season. Only a handful of players locally — male or female — can say that they have had the career she has had, and that Captain Marvel ball-marker was along for the ride the entire time.

"One of the things for me this year was to keep my head on straight after a bad shot. Whenever I would make one, I would think of one of Nick Fury's quotes, 'Hope for the best and make do with what you get,' " said Eder, invoking the image of Captain Marvel's close friend. "Sometimes, you hope that you hit a good shot, but it's not always going to happen and, if not, you make do and move on. It's just one of those movies that has definitely helped me. It just gives me a calm mind on the golf course so that maybe I can be like this superhero."

While Eder has produced a career to envy, she still didn't accomplish all of her goals. Despite her impressive credentials, she made the IHSAA State Finals only once — tying for 56th as a sophomore — while missing the cut by just one stroke each of the last two years.

Like her hero, Eder prefers not to dwell on past failures, confident that she has done everything she could in order to be successful.

"It's definitely just insane how sophomore year I went to a tie-breaker and had to go into playoff just to make it to state and then the next two years, I missed the cut by one stroke. And it was upsetting those years, but I feel like I still pushed myself," Eder said. "I was kind of happy that I still got something out of it and I'm seeing rewards. So I was kind of devastated that I didn't get to go to state but I feel like it's kind of pushed me to get better.

"I haven't had all that I've wanted but I still have had a pretty good career and I didn't realize how good it was until mainly this year," Eder added. "Finding out other things like the school records and then there's never been a girl that has won medalist for the sectional four times and just little things like that where I'm like, 'Wow, that's something that I didn't even think about.' It's kind of just been a whirlwind the past few years and I feel like they're all clumped into one year."

Eder has already signed with Marian University and while she's looking forward to the rest of her senior year, she's also excited to get to college and see what she can do over the next four years in Indianapolis. She has big plans at the next level and beyond.

"I'm really hoping that at Marian I get to develop my skills and become a better, stronger golfer," she said. "And then hopefully go into the golf professional career after college and try that out for a little bit. That would be cool."
